TREASURER'S NOTE

Margaret Smith, who died earlier this year, was our Church Secretary for some years and a Deacon and very much part of the worship team until she became housebound and then had to move into residential care. The Church has just received 2,000 pounds as a legacy from Margaret, a very welcome addition to our funds and good to know that she remembered us even after six or seven years when she was not able to worship with us.

Anyone visiting the Church in the last month has begun to see changes in one area of the sanctuary as our new soft play area takes shape but there is an almost invisible change you should also know about which has given us more storage space downstairs. In one corner of the hall there is now access through the ceiling to some much needed storage space, equipped with a basic floor, lighting and a pull-down ladder.

Ewan and Gaynor have been putting in some time to prepare a bid for financial support for our much wanted lift and we hope to present it for some charitable funding to add to the amount we can call on from our own savings. It will be an enormous upheaval to have a lift installed but if we can achieve it our use of the hall will be so much greater and allow us to offer use of the hall to a wider range of local activities, and also make sure that people who cannot at the moment take part in the Contact Club because they cannot negotiate the stairs, can be welcomed there on Sunday evenings.

As ever, if you are a regular giver and would like a PIN to write on your offering envelope (a three digit number instead of name and address details), want details of how to set up a standing order to make regular contributions to Heath Street, or need to know anything about Gift Aid, do please ask me when you see me or email me at gaynor@eandghumphreys.plus.com.

With love and best wishes, Gaynor

FROM OUR MUSIC OUTREACH COORDINATOR

Tuesday Lunchtime concerts and Thursday Oldtime Nursery stopped for August: a time to reflect, seek direction and hear God's voice for the new year ahead starting in September.

Often music from the past, especially in the western tradition from the baroque to romantic, is presented as an idyllic dream, or a perfect product, often in an elitist environment to those who already 'understand' it. However as well as dividing force, music can bring people together, as it does every week in our church and churches all over the world, across different languages and in many musical traditions.

Music provides a platform for the truth of the gospel to be imprinted on our minds and the spirit to work in our hearts so that we cannot help but serve the Lord from an overflow of gratitude and thankfulness for what He's done for us. And so as many art forms, it also become a tool for us to bring people together, creating shared experiences which can be treasured and provide a mutual focus where otherwise there might not be one. This is the rationale for many if not all our weekly activities, including our Oldtime Nursery and lunchtime concerts, as well as the Baroquestock festival which the church members have kindly allowed to take place.

Baroquestock specifically aims to present music from the baroque and classical periods in a welcoming, friendly and social environment. It has only been made possible by volunteers in our wider church mid-week communities as well as some of our members as well as those of other churches. In October we plan to host a Baroquestock Opera.

This is a whole new challenge in many ways, and I hope you don't mind me saying it presents a unique opportunity for members of the congregation to practice their...hospitality skills! So please do let me know if you might be interested in helping out in any this capacity - could be just being around and talking to people, or helping out in the kitchen or helping with clearing up.

In seriousness, making our church building and congregation a welcoming environment is part of our calling as Christians and as a church, and provides us opportunities to meet new people, share an experience with them, and maybe personally invite a few of those who have questions and are curious about the Gospel, to join us on a Sunday as we discover and journey through our faith together.

One other note - If anyone's interested interested in joining a bible study group please talk to myself or Wilf.

Every second Tuesday of the month a strange sound fills the basement of Heath Street Baptist Church. It's loud, powerful, and raw. It's Sacred Harp. Sacred Harp is an old tradition of community singing, which stems from the US and which has been around since before the US Civil War. The music is always sung unaccompanied, in four parts, with all singers seated in a 'hollow' square.

Sacred Harp is a form of shapenote singing. Shapenotes are a musical notation system designed to make sight-reading music easier for new singers. In the case of Sacred Harp four syllables are used to signify the seven notes on the scale and the intervals between them. Each of the syllables is represented by a distinctive shape: a triangle for fa , an oval for sol , a rectangle for la, and a diamond for mi. While there are many songbooks using the shapenote system, the Sacred Harp (Denson edition) is by far the most widely used book, and the book London Sacred Harp primarily sing from.

The beauty of singing Sacred Harp lies in its inherently participatory and democratic nature. There are no auditions, no rehearsals, no performances. We sing for ourselves and each other. There is no group leader or hierarchy, but at singings each singer has a chance to select a song for the group to sing and to lead it from the centre of the square, where the four harmonies come together. Singers can choose to return to old favourites or to explore the over 500 songs in the book.

While Sacred Harp singing in the American South has been - and still is - a religious practice, it has always been an open and welcoming one. In the Northern States and Europe the practice has moved beyond the religious, although for many singers it can still be a spiritual experience. What still typifies Sacred Harp, however, is the strong sense of community among its singers across the world. Never is this more clear than at all-day singing, hosted annually by local groups, which centre on a shared "dinner on the grounds". Something we cannot recreate at our monthly Hampstead sing, but we do enjoy our tea breaks and post-singing pint together! For many singers it is the music which draws them in, but it is the people to sing it with that keep them coming back.

If you would like to give Sacred Harp singing a go, or if you would like to come by for a listen, please do come and join us at Heath Street Baptist Church on the second Tuesday of each month and on various other locations in the capital. For full details, please see our website londonsacredharp.org. As much of the joy in Sacred Harp comes from singing, we strongly encourage you to join in and we are always happy to give a brief introduction to the shapenote system to new listeners. We hope to see you soon!

At the back of this and every Heath Street newsletter a congregational prayer calendar is to be found. Whether or not you are a regular prayer, please join us as we remember one another before God day by day. As users of the prayer calendar know, I often intersperse people's names with Bible verses or lines from hymns. (Particularly when the newsletter covers several months, meaning more days than congregation members!). In this issue those verses follow the themes for September's Sunday worship, namely harvest, ecology, and the care of the earth that Christians are called to exercise.

Thinking about the environment is typically a depressing business. There seems to be so little one can do as an individual, so little we want to do as a society. So all the more reason to turn to prayer! But also to encourage one another to act, and to fuel our action with theological reflection on the nature of God and God's world.

There's also much to be said for what small-scale, face-to-face communities like churches can achieve. One small thing this church will be doing this month is undergoing an EcoAudit, under the hopefully-not-too-severe eye of Donnachadh McCarthy, who runs Three Acorns (www.3acorns.co.uk). Hopefully that will be a spur to transforming our practice for the better: please bear it in mind as you pray through the names and the verses list on the list.

With love,

p.s. People have sometimes been intrigued or baffled by initials in the prayer list. Suffice to say there are various reasons why it might not always be a good idea to have one's name on the internet in association with a church. If you want to know who you're supposed to pray for and can't guess, do feel free to enquire! And if your name's not in this list and you'd like it to be just ask!
