Rector's Reflection

Can God redeem the rising opposition to public Christianity in our day? I firmly believe the answer lies in prayer. And we can pray in two specific ways for them.

One: Pray for those with whom we disagree.

Jesus taught us to “pray for those who persecute you” (Matthew 5:44). And we should do so with compassion and grace.

Biblical illiteracy is widespread in our culture and those who oppose biblical morality may not have been given the opportunity to understand biblical truth. Or they may have fallen victim to “the god of this world [who] has blinded the minds of the unbelievers” (2 Corinthians 4:4).

Many who oppose Christians who take a stand against abortion or same-sex marriage genuinely believe that we are “anti-women” and “anti-gays.” In their view, our beliefs threaten the human rights of millions of people. They couldn’t be more wrong, but nonetheless they are not our enemy. They deserve our intercession for we are only “beggars helping other beggars find bread.”

Two: Pray for the strength to speak the truth in love (Ephesians 4:15).

When the moment comes that we face persecution, don’t let your heart be troubled. Trust in the Lord. He is with you in your suffering and will not let you down. Speak the truth of His word and it will find soil that is ready to receive it.

Now here is a thought, what if the growing opposition to Christian values in our culture leads us to turn more fully to our Lord and results in the spiritual awakening we need so desperately?

Blessings,

Garth
