July

Did you know that July was named by the Roman Senate in honour of the Roman general, Julius Caesar it being the month of his birth? Prior to that, it was called Quintilis which surprisingly means fifth month. July starts on the same day of the week as April in every year, and January in leap years. In a common year no other month ends on the same day as July, while in a leap year July ends on the same day of the week as January.

Actually most of us would have scarcely given the matter of July a thought although it's always interesting to learn of the provenance of everyday things. I suppose however that for many of us what is to the fore in our minds is the holiday season.

The Church calendar recognizes this in as much as there is a lessening of the number of important festivals as so many of our events are geared to the seasons in the Northern Hemisphere. Of course the downside is that the seasons are cyclical and if I might misquote Shelley's poem 'Ode to the West Wind' 'If summer comes, can winter be far behind?'

Whatever the case rest and refreshment does no-one any harm. This applies to our spiritual lives as well, not in taking time off from church or forgetting God for a while but on the contrary pausing in the middle of busy lives to reflect and pray. Both of these personal disciplines are often squeezed out by day-to-day existence.

These are troubled times and there does seem to be as much if not more unrest in the wider world, perhaps even more than usual. It's easy to be overwhelmed so perhaps July does or at least could get us through.

After all the famous 'Dog Days' begin in early July, when the hot sultry weather of summer is supposed to start. The Romans referred to the dog days as dies caniculares and associated the hot weather with the star Sirius (the dog star) that is prominent in the sky at this time of year.

Hot of cold I do wish you all a very happy and restful holiday season – in the meantime don't forget that St Martin's remains open for business!

Nicholas

As the world changes, so must the church. Therefore in keeping with new ways of giving, we have now set up a new way to donate to St Martin's - by text. This will be a huge help for us; not only giving people who are browsing our website a way to donate, but it can be used for specific fund raising campaigns, as well as for regular giving in church, meaning people are not limited to the change they have in their pockets. It's quick and easy, and if you have any great ideas on new ways to advertise this please get in touch.

Christian Aid Week 2015

This year, the sum of £894.20 was collected from our congregation and sent to Christian Aid.

St Martin's is one amongst the 20,000 churches across Britain and Ireland who actively support the work of Christian Aid and we can be sure that the organisation is most grateful for all our help and has sent a big "Thank You" to everyone.

Christian Aid has been working for 70 years to alleviate poverty and suffering in the poorer parts of the world. You can read details of their work on their website at www.christianaid.org.uk.

Christian Aid works for a world where everyone can live a full life, free from poverty. They work in partnership with other major relief organisations and with local partners, both to give emergency aid and also to help with healthcare and education and agriculture in poor communities.

We hope to have a guest speaker from Christian Aid who will tell us more about their work when we celebrate our Harvest Festival on Sunday 4^{th} October.

The Great War - 100 years on

Continuing to tell the story behind the 36 names on our War Memorial. The research behind this story of John Birch presented a few challenges. I had to first trace where he was buried through the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. Please accept my apologies for any inaccuracies in the battle's detail. Editor.

Turkey 1915: The War was not going so well and by late June Lord Kitchener decided to send reinforcements to the Gallipoli peninsular. However, these would not arrive until late summer. In the interim Lord Kitchener instructed Sir Ian Hamilton, The Mediterranean Expeditionary Force Commander-in-Chief, to mount a series of attacks against the Turks. Among these is what has come to be called the Battle of Gully Ravine.

This battle started on 28 June 1915 along the Aegean spine of the peninsula following a moderate French success a week earlier. The newly appointed commander, Major-General, Henry de Beauvoir de Lisle, proposed a limited-objective attack along the Gully Ravine Spur - in accordance with Hamilton's wish that no sweeping breakthrough be attempted. The British Forces would have support from two Indian Brigades and the Artillery. However, due to a shortage of ammunition only 12,000 rounds were allocated for the attack.

The attack went well at first and two lines of Turkish trenches were seized by the British with light losses. Another Brigade, newly-arrived, also reached the Turkish trenches. However, these Forces had no effective artillery support and were thrown back with heavy losses. Determined Turkish counter-strikes progressively restored Turkish control to the trenches seized by the Allies on the Gully Ravine Spur. The Battle of Gully Ravine lasted a week.

Today, nearby, you will find 'The Twelve Tree Copse' Commonwealth War Cemetery. It contains the graves of 1,407 men. One of those who lay buried there was a parishioner of St Martin. Second Lieutenant John Birch was 22 when he lost his life on 5th July 1915. He was the son of Walter and Emily Birch, of 19 Twyford Avenue.

100 years after his sacrifice: We remember him.

Conservation Foundation launches a new yew campaign

A new campaign to celebrate the heritage of the nation's ancient yew trees has been launched to mark the 800th anniversary year of Magna Carta. 'We Love Yew' is being run by The Conservation Foundation, with support from the Heritage Lottery Fund, and in association with the Church of England and the UK's Magna Carta 800th Anniversary Committee.

The UK has one of the world's greatest collections of ancient and veteran yews, with many older than the Magna Carta, for which the Ankerwycke yew is thought to have provided shelter for the Barons, Bishops and King John. The Conservation Foundation's We Love Yew project encourages communities to appreciate these special trees, and to apply for a free sapling, propagated by The Conservation Foundation from yews estimated to have been alive at the time of the Magna Carta. A limited number is also available for sale to individuals and organisations. Small grants toward maintenance and signage are available to custodians of ancient and veteran yews and for community events to celebrate their yew's history.

David Shreeve, director of The Conservation Foundation says, "Our ancient yews are a very special part of our cultural heritage. Over the centuries many events, including the sealing of Magna Carta took place under a yew tree. Yews can be older than the church where they are near, but often have very little official protection. We hope this new project will encourage people to learn about their local yew and its place in the history of where they live."

The story behind 'Just as I am'

The hymn 'Just As I Am' must be one of the most famous in the world. Yet it was not written by a professional who was 'aiming' at a specific market, as many songs seem to be written today. Instead, it was written by an artist in Victorian times. Her name was Charlotte Elliott, and she was born in Clapham in 1789. She grew up in a well to do home, and became a portrait artist and also a writer of humorous verse. All was well until Charlotte fell ill in her early 30s, and slid into a black depression. A minister, Dr Caesar Malan of Switzerland, came to visit her. Instead of sympathising, he asked her an unexpected question: did she have peace with God? Charlotte deeply resented the question and told him to mind his own business.

But after he left, his question haunted her. Did she have peace with God? She invited Dr Malan to return. She told him that she would like to become a Christian, but would have to sort out her life first. Dr Malan again said the unexpected: "Come just as you are." The words were a revelation to Charlotte. She had assumed that she would have to put her life in order before she could hope to be accepted by God. Instead, she realised that Jesus wanted her just as she was.

Charlotte became a Christian that day. 14 years later, in 1836, Charlotte wrote some verses that summed up how it had been between her and Jesus that day. They ran:

Just as I am, without one plea, But that thy blood was shed for me, And that thou bids't me come to Thee O lamb of God, I come! I come!

Just as I am, tho tossed about With many a conflict, many a doubt Fightings within, and fears without, O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

Charlotte could not have dreamed that 150 years into the future, her verses would be sung by millions of people all over the world as they responded to the Gospel presented at many great Billy Graham crusades, and made their way forward to do just as the hymn describes - to come to Jesus Christ, despite sin and fear and doubts, to come 'just as I am.'

Why women bishops have clergy husbands

The first three women bishops to be appointed (Libby Lane to Stockport, Alison White to Hull and Rachel Treweek to Gloucester) all have clergy husbands. Why? Prof Linda Woodhead has speculated: "The most amusing suggestion I've heard is that the Church is looking for women bishops with experience of managing male clergy." Heavenly scents...

There is nothing quite like the smell of freshly baked bread, it seems. That came top in a recent poll to find Britain's favourite smells. Other scents in the Top Ten were: bacon frying, newly mown grass, freshly ground coffee, cakes baking in the oven, the seaside, just laundered clothes, a Sunday roast, fish and chips – and fresh flowers.

The Top 50 favourites also included some unusual scents, such as paint, rain, new books, and petrol. The top worst scents were bins, drains, body odour, garlic breath, sports changing rooms and fish. The research by Harris, the decorating brand, also found that six in ten of us believe that certain scents remind us of particular people or places.
