

Coventry Cathedral wins national award

Despite the challenges posed by the coronavirus pandemic, this year's Group Leisure & Travel Awards ceremony went ahead with a special online broadcast to recognise the top attractions, tour operators and experiences as voted for by group travel organisers.

Group Leisure & Travel Magazine is a monthly publication, read by people who organise group trips for friends, colleagues, clubs, societies and companies. The annual Group Leisure & Travel Awards recognise the best providers, attractions and destinations for groups, as voted for by readers of Group Leisure & Travel.

Coventry Cathedral was nominated in the category of 'Best Historic Attraction or Venue', in an extremely strong field which also included Alnwick Castle, Belvoir Castle, Blenheim Palace, Bletchley Park and Buckingham Palace - who won the category last year.

The Cathedral's Head of Tourism and Engagement Carla said: "Winning this award against such strong competition would always have been an amazing honour, but winning it at a time which is so unusual and tricky for the tourism industry as a whole makes it feel even more special."

"This award is a testament not only to the hard work of our customer facing Welcome Team, but also those who work tirelessly behind the scenes across the organisation – staff and volunteers. Everyone works together keep the Cathedral at its best for our visitors. We are incredibly thankful and look forward to welcoming more visitors in the coming months so we can show you just why we're an award winning Cathedral!"

The 2020 ceremony was full of surprises including tricks by magician and TV presenter Ben Hanlin, best known for his award-winning ITV2 series Tricked as well as finishing as a semi-finalist in this year's Dancing on Ice.

Ben said: "We've had 116 finalists and 20 winners, congratulations to everyone. It was an absolute pleasure to host the awards and it's great that the GLT team has been able to make it happen."

The annual initiative, now in its 24th year, is organised by Group Leisure & Travel, Britain's leading monthly magazine for people who organise group trips and holidays. A total of 20 awards were announced, including Best UK Attraction and Best Guided Tour.

November 2020

An experience of Covid 19

The first indication that things weren't quite right was when I was walking my dog on the Monday evening. I was aware that my muscles were aching, but as I was otherwise fine I thought no more of it. However at 3am the next morning, I woke shivering all over. An hour later I was drenched in sweat. My temperature was 38.4 I knew I needed to self isolate and get a test. Feeling so grim that I couldn't sleep, I curled up on the sofa and at 6am started trying to book a test online.

Four and a half frustrating hours later, I got a drive through appointment for later that afternoon. I wasn't that worried. I had been careful and I didn't know anyone else locally who had been ill, so I thought I had one of the colds that seemed to be doing the rounds. I had a horrid sore throat and congested sinuses, which seemed to support my assumption. It was just irritating having to self isolate until the test came back. The test centre were friendly and efficient and told me I would probably have the result within 24 hours, so we started planning what we would do when I got the all clear. My husband had a list for the supermarket. I was going to walk the rather bored dog.

I spent most of the next 24 hours in bed dozed up on paracetamol to hold the fever and aches at bay. (Although I did lead a brief online midweek service from my living room.) Then on Wednesday afternoon, I woke up from yet another nap to find a text on my phone. I had tested positive for Covid.

There have been many surprises about this diagnosis. The first is the sheer amount of Covid related admin there is! I had to contact my senior staff colleagues, my curate and my Churchwardens. We had to make decisions about the Sunday service and agree a form of words for the weekly church email. The track and trace form took some time and energy to complete, and there were repeated phone calls to my daughters' worried schools. And then there were all the messages from well wishers, family and friends who had heard the news.

One of the hardest things has been the consequence of my diagnosis on others. As I mentioned, I thought I had been very careful, but a colleague still needed to self isolate as we had had a 1m+ outdoor meeting the day I became unwell (track and trace do not recognise mitigations like being outside or wearing a face covering on their form). We had had dealings with self employed tradespeople and I was terrified they would have to isolate and suffer loss of earnings. Thankfully, they were outside the contact window. The implications for my daughters' schools were immense – we had the potential to affect three different year groups if the girls had it (so far, they haven't). It was a source of huge comfort to me that my curate had presided at our in-building worship the previous Sunday. Despite the robust safety procedures we had in place, I would have tortured myself with the possibility of accidentally infecting my beloved congregation.

Psychologically, being diagnosed with Covid was rather strange. On one hand, I knew that there was at least an 80% chance that I wouldn't become significantly unwell. I was under 50, healthy and didn't have any of the risk factors. But I had seen one of my best clergy friends experience long tail Covid and didn't relish the prospect of that. I had also conducted the funerals of three local men in their 40s who had died of Covid during lockdown. As a priest, I had seen firsthand the tragedy this virus could cause. It didn't help either that the main narratives in the media have either been of covid deaths or of long tail cases, understandable thought that might be. I ended up messaging a clergy friend from another diocese who I knew had had Covid and got better. "Tell me some normal covid stories!" I begged. Her reassurance was a lifeline.

Ministry wise, it is so frustrating. After the rollercoaster of the last six months, I finally felt like I was getting my head around being a church for our parish in the midst of a pandemic. We had great plans for building relationship, community and hope in safe ways over the coming months. Of course, that is still happening, but I don't have the energy to be in the middle of it where I like to be and I don't know when I will. Currently, even a brief phone call wipes me out. Instead, as a staunchly independent type, I am having to let others minister to me. My curate has taken over my priestly responsibilities. My pastoral care team are praying for me. My Churchwardens are organising parish practicalities. My diocesan colleagues are picking up other roles I fulfil. Friends are shopping and walking the dog and sending cheering things through the mail. I have been deluged with love and care from all over the place. I am humbled and blessed.

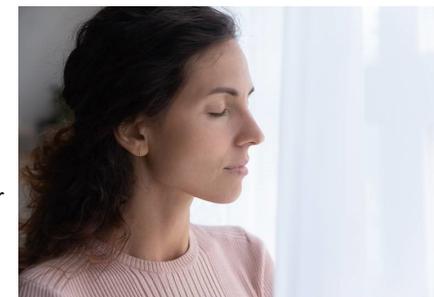

I think longer term this experience will keep me from complacency. I thought I was doing everything according to the book and was really unlikely to get Covid. I still got it, and I thank God that I didn't put more people at risk in the days before my symptoms started. I think my top tip for ministry colleagues would be to constantly assume they might be carrying covid and be really strict about your hand washing, mask wearing and above all distancing. We need our churches to be places of hope not risk, especially for those more vulnerable to covid's effects than ourselves.

Safe Spaces launches to offer support to survivors

A new service providing vital support for survivors of church-related abuse was launched in October.

Safe Spaces is a free and independent support service, providing a confidential, personal and safe space for anyone who has been abused through their relationship with either the Church of England, the Catholic Church of England and Wales or the Church in Wales.

You can contact the Safe Spaces team by:-

Tel: 0300 303 1056 (answerphone available outside of opening times)

Email: safespaces@victimsupport.org.uk

Safe Spaces comprises a team of trained support advocates, who have undergone specialist training in supporting survivors of sexual violence and who have received additional specific training in how the churches respond to abuse cases, the way in which faith and church-related settings have been used to carry out abuse, and the particular issues affecting people who have had or still have, a relationship with the church.

The service is for those who may have experienced any form abuse, including sexual abuse, physical abuse, financial abuse, psychological abuse (including spiritual abuse), domestic abuse, coercive and controlling behaviour.

The dedicated Safe Spaces team are available through the helpline and live chat service on:

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday: 10am-6pm
Thursday: 12pm-8pm.

A member of the Safe Spaces team will make contact within 48 hours (72 hours on weekends) of making a referral.

The service will run for an initial two years, with a view to extending this. It has been paid for by the Catholic and Anglican churches involved, supported by a grant from Allchurches Trust.
