

Thinking it through

God didn't answer Job's question, yet Job learned something more about God that helped.

Only the God of the Bible is the powerful king, caring sustainer and infinitely wise Creator. How should these three great truths shape the way we think about suffering?

Why do you think Job is comforted by God's answer? What does it mean for God to be the wise, caring and powerful Creator? Where do we see these same truths in the life and death of Jesus? Do you find this a comfort? How can these truths help you when life is hard?

We are quite happy with asking questions, of those around us and of God, but how good are we at listening to the response. Take some time this week to be still and listen. Is there a particular Bible story/passage that challenges you? Share this with someone you trust

Look out, or go out and notice what God has created. What do you notice about the weather? The place where you walk?

God loves to hear our voices, whether in prayer or praise.
