At the start of a new academic year I can't put into words how wonderful it has been having all the children back in school – we have all missed them enormously.

The children have made a fantastic start. It is amazing to see how enthusiastic each class has been about being with their friends again and for their future learning. The children always impress us all at Hollinhey with their fantastic attitude to their learning. They have shown us that despite things being “a little bit different” in school they are enthusiastic and determined to do their best. We are very proud of them.

Over the first few days and weeks the whole school focused on a curriculum that helps our children to re-connect with each other, with the school environment and with their learning. This work has focused around the book, “Here we are” by Oliver Jeffers. This also gave the children time to talk about their experiences of lockdown and the feelings that they have had whilst being away from school.

As a result of this work they have produced some fantastic work for our whole school display.
