

Date: Thursday 16th July 2020

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

PRESS RELEASE

FREE AT LAST? | Bradford Cathedral to host online seminar about addressing racism and contributing to change

Professor Udy Archibong and Bishop Tony Parry, who will be giving addresses at July's 'Free at Last?' event.

Bradford Cathedral will be hosting a 75-minute seminar on Monday 20th July entitled 'Free at Last?', which will look at why it's now a significant moment to address racism and how we can contribute to change.

The seminar, which will be hosted by the Very Revd Jerry Lepine, Dean of Bradford, will feature addresses from Professor Udy Archibong and Bishop Tony Parry.

Udy Archibong is the Professor of Diversity at the University of Bradford and Tony Parry is the HOSPITALITY. FAITHFULNESS. WHOLENESS.

District Bishop for the New Testament Church of God and Senior Pastor of Leeds NTCG. Both are Ecumenical Canons of Bradford Cathedral and immensely experienced in the field of racial justice in this region and further afield.

Bishop Tony Parry:

“My brief talk examines the notion from tolerance to liberation as it relates to racism in all its forms, whether that is personal, institutional or systemic.

“I will also draw on some research myself, and the Revd Dr David Randolph-Horn, were commissioned to do with the then Diocese of Ripon and Leeds, in terms of a Racial Justice Strategic Review.”

‘Free at Last?’ will take place via Zoom on Monday 20th July at 7pm. Those wishing to book a free place for the seminar can do so by visiting the Bradford Cathedral website, with the Zoom link sent out via e-mail ahead of the event.

You can find out more about ‘Free at Last?’ and book your free place for the online seminar at <https://bradfordcathedral.churchsuite.co.uk/events/qejwmurg>

ENDS

Notes for Editors

About Bradford Cathedral

Bradford Cathedral has been a place of worship in Bradford since the first millennium. It is the oldest building in the city and, alongside being a place of worship, hosts events, arts projects and much more.

For further information please contact:

Philip Lickley

Communications, Marketing and Events Officer

e: commsandevents@bradfordcathedral.org