Here is the first in a series of articles designed to highlight how our welcome, worship and other activities can include everyone. This forms just a small part of the response to the document Welcome, Inclusion, Respect - A Commitment to a Church Open to All produced by the Diocese of Leeds.

Understanding young people

Opinions about children have changed over time. For example, in mediaeval times people thought that young people were basically miniature adults, whereas nowadays we view children as small, sensitive individuals who see the world differently. As well as this, in today's times a lot of people claim to actually love children. For most parents, a lot of what they talk about is my child this and my child that. In fact, I have recently just read an article titled Children are a compass for parents and society as a whole. In conclusion, children are celebrated and loved by a majority. However, do we really know how to treat children? Obviously, we know that things like abuse and bullying are wrong but apart from that, what do we really know?

I, along with others, have distinct memories of feeling scared or intimidated by various adults in my childhood. Maybe they shouted at me or told me off and as a result, I felt scared of them. I also have distinct memories of feeling irritated by adults. I mean, for starters you don't listen well. Furthermore, I have sometimes felt that adults are a different species because their lives are very unlike mine. Of course, it's natural for adults and young people to live differently but weren't adults young once too? If so, shouldn't they know how young people think from their own memories of being a young person? However, it's easy to forget. We're only human after all. But children deserve to be treated correctly and the only way to do this is to understand them. I mean, children are the future and how do you want the next generation of human beings to turn out?

Religious identity then and now 1569 – 2019

Marking the 450th Anniversary of the Rising of the North

Markenfield Hall played a part in the Rising of the North in 1569, which attempted to stop the spread of the Protestant faith by deposing Elizabeth I and replacing her with the Catholic Mary, Queen of Scots. Sir Thomas de Markenfield was one of the main instigators of the plot and on 20th November 1569, a large contingent of rebels met at the Hall. They heard Mass in the Chapel before setting out on their ultimately fruitless quest. By January the rebellion had failed, and great numbers had been hanged as traitors in Ripon Market Place where a plaque commemorates the events. The Ripon Support Group of the Anglican Centre Rome has arranged a day to mark this anniversary at Markenfield Hall and at Thorp Prebend in Ripon on Saturday 26th October. For more information contact Jenny Spruce at jmhspr@aol.com.

Tickets cost £5, students £3, including breakfast and refreshments.

Organ accompaniment is by renowned organist John Longstaff, Director of Music and Organist at St Peter's Church. Vocalis will start the concert with Bach's funeral motet for double choir Der Geist Hilft unser Schwachheit Auf.

Vocalis with invited singers will sing Fauré's Cantique de Jean Racine, concluding with his Requiem.
