Who can apply?

The FFM course is open to all lay people in the Diocese of Manchester but it should be noted that it is not a Christian basics/discipleship course or a beginner's introduction to theology. FFM is a course specifically designed for those active in church life who have already been rooted and established in their Christian faith. It aims to help them further explore their gifts, vocation and calling to Christian ministry. We encourage anyone considering application to discuss this firstly with their vicar or supporting minister. This is to ensure that the course is suitable and so that any applicants will be fully supported during the course.

Are there any assignments, tests or written work?

There are no assignments, tests or essay type written work on the course. The main focus for learning is based around interactive presentations, group work, open discussions and lots of opportunities for personal reflection. We do encourage those that want to go deeper to keep a simple learning journal and to engage with some short linkwork exercises between sessions. However, this is optional and for personal use only. We don't ask for any work to be submitted or require anything to be marked or graded. Along the way, we will suggest some good books and further resources but everyone is supported to engage with the course at the level that works best for them.

How much does the course cost?

All the costs of FFM training are met by the diocese but parishes are encouraged (where possible) to support their candidates if help is required with basic costs such as travel expenses. Where finances are a barrier to participation, parishes are encouraged to get in touch.
