

1979 saw the release of what would become the most watched film in history. 'The Jesus film', has been viewed six million times by people all over the globe. It has introduced billions of individuals around the world to the person of Jesus and depicts the birth, ministry, death and resurrection of Christ faithfully in line with the Gospel of Luke.

Jesus is portrayed in the film by British Shakespearean actor Brian Deacon and almost every word he speaks throughout the entire film is taken directly from Scripture. Around 450 biblical scholars reviewed the script for accuracy, while filming took place in Israel and first-century methods were used to produce clothing and props in order to ensure complete historical veracity wherever possible.

The movie is officially the most translated film in history, and is now available in almost 1,200 languages. In addition, its depiction of the life of Christ has proved to be an effective evangelism tool. More than 200 million individuals worldwide have indicated a decision to become Christians following a viewing. The Jesus Film' script is taken directly from the Bible and shown in a cinematic style suitable for all ages.
