Anthony Knight

We are delighted that next Sunday, 30th June, the young violinist Anthony Knight will be making a return visit to St John's. Anthony will be performing a 15-minute recital after the 9.30 communion service.

Anthony is currently on a sponsored, year-long recital tour of the most exclusive hotels in Europe, to raise funds for UNICEF. There is a clip of Anthony performing the Largo from Bach's Sonata No. 3 in the Lobby Lounge of Adlon Kempinski:

Anthony said about his sponsored Tour, which has so far raised £10,830 for UNICEF: "What began as an idea, has turned into an amazing adventure, full of memorable experiences, which I hope will inspire other young people to use their talents for good." Anthony chose to support UNICEF, as it's the largest international charity that helps children in conflict zones around the world. He's increased his target to £20,000.

Anthony has also performed recitals in Paris, Venice, Riga, Vilnius, Vienna, Prague and Budapest, during which time he has been a great ambassador for young Brits. The final leg of his sponsored Grand Tour for UNICEF will be to the Benelux Countries plus Switzerland from 14th till 23rd July, finishing with a performance in Bern Minster on 21st July.

Anthony is immensely proud of these achievements, which recognise, not only his violin playing, but also his commitment to music being a force for good in this world. He will be starting a BMus Degree at RCM in September.

He will perform 'Nigun' by Ernest Bloch and the Main Theme from 'Ladies in Lavender' by Nigel Hess.
